While the rental industry will play a vital role in Viksit Bharat, it will also be fundamentally transformed by it

Building Viksit Bharat will require a stronger rental industry, and in the process, it will redefine it.

Jitender Aggarwal,
Chairman & Managing Director

The vision of Viksit Bharat represents one of the most ambitious infrastructure expansion programs in India's history. Massive investments in roads, railways, ports, airports, urban development, renewable energy, and industrial corridors will define the journey toward a developed nation.

In this transformation, the Infrastructure Equipment Rental Industry will play a vital enabling role. As projects become larger, faster, and more technically demanding, contractors will increasingly depend on reliable rental partners for timely access to modern equipment. Renting ensures flexibility, reduces capital burden, and improves asset utilization across projects of varying scale and duration.

However, this growth story is not one-sided. While the rental industry will support PM Narendra Modi's vision of Viksit Bharat, it will also be fundamentally transformed by it.

As infrastructure projects become more complex and timelines tighter, the expectations from rental companies will rise significantly. The business will no longer be about simply supplying machines. It will be about guaranteeing uptime, ensuring reliability, delivering responsive service, and building long-term trust with customers. This shift demands stronger leadership, structured processes, continuous technical training, and a culture of accountability.

Digital transformation will further accelerate this evolution. AI-enabled analytics, telematics, real-time fleet tracking, and predictive maintenance systems will redefine how fleets are managed. Data-driven decision-making will become essential rather than optional. The industry is also moving toward platform-based models where equipment can be booked, tracked, and managed through mobile applications, much like ride-hailing services such as Ola Cabs and Uber. In the near future, contractors may be able to access equipment on demand with full visibility on availability, pricing, location, and performance through integrated digital marketplaces. Companies that embrace such technology and develop tech-savvy, adaptable teams will gain a decisive competitive edge.

Human capital will be the defining factor. In an asset-heavy industry, machines create capacity, but skilled professionals create performance. Investment in workforce development, safety standards, and employee engagement will determine which companies lead the next phase of growth.

Sustainability will also shape the industry's future. Equipment rental promotes shared usage, reduces idle assets, optimizes fleet efficiency, and lowers overall carbon emissions compared to individual ownership models. As India advances toward its development goals, environmentally responsible infrastructure practices will become increasingly important, positioning rental as a sustainable solution.

In the journey toward Viksit Bharat, the rental industry will not merely be a supporting participant. It will be a strategic partner in nation-building. At the same time, the scale, speed, and sophistication of this national mission will push the industry to evolve, modernize, and professionalize like never before.

Viksit Bharat will build infrastructure. The rental industry will help build Viksit Bharat. And in doing so, it will reinvent itself for the future.

Union Budget 2026: Big Infra Push Fuels Growth, But Misses Green Rental Opportunity

Views of Mr. Jitender Aggarwal, CMD, AGGCON

The Union Budget 2026 reflects Prime Minister Narendra Modi's continued and strong push for infrastructure-led growth. The increase in capital expenditure to ₹12.2 lakh crore for FY 2026–27 reinforces the government's commitment to building world-class transport, logistics, urban infrastructure, and connectivity. This sustained public investment keeps infrastructure firmly at the centre of India's growth strategy.

The higher capex allocation will also provide a significant boost to the infrastructure equipment rental sector. That said, given that equipmentrental helps reduce carbon emissions and promotes efficient asset utilization, there was an opportunity for the government to introduce incentives encouraging contractors and construction companies to rent rather than purchase equipment outright. Such measures could have further strengthened India's sustainability agenda.

Overall, the Budget is progressive and forward-looking, aligned with the long-term vision of Viksit Bharat.

Delivering High-Precision Heavy Lifting for Critical Metro Infrastructure

AGGCON successfully completed the critical lifting and lowering operation of a Tunnel Boring Machine (TBM) Front Shield Bearing, weighing approximately 100 tons, at the L&T Construction – Patna Museum Delhi Metro Rail Corporation (DMRC) project site.

The operation was carried out using an XCMG XGC 400 crawler crane equipped with a dedicated TBM jib, enabling efficient handling of heavy and complex components in a constrained environment.

A key highlight of this operation was the self-tilting lifting and lowering process executed through the TBM jib. This method ensured precise placement of the component despite challenging site conditions, demonstrating a high level of technical expertise and planning.

The execution demanded exceptional accuracy and strict adherence to safety protocols, making it a high-precision, safety-critical task. The project was successfully delivered by AGGCON's skilled operations team, experienced crane operators, and technical specialists, who ensured seamless coordination throughout the process.

AGGCON extends its sincere gratitude to L&T Construction and Delhi Metro Rail Corporation (DMRC) for the opportunity to contribute as a trusted rental partner in this prestigious infrastructure project.

3H Philosophy: Happy Machines, Happy People, Happy Customers

— Mrs. Renu Aggarwal, Whole Time Director

Sometimes, machines speak if only we pause to listen. A part stops working, and the whole process halts. On inspection, we find the root cause. Had we noticed its early signals, asked, “Are you okay?” perhaps the interruption could have been avoided.

At AGGCON, we take this idea to heart. We believe machines, like people, deserve attention, care, and respect. Our teams greet them daily, monitor their “well-being,” and ensure they operate smoothly. The result? Machines that perform better, people who feel valued, and clients who experience seamless service.

We call it our 3H philosophy: Happy Machines, Happy People, Happy Customers.

In a world rushing for productivity, sometimes the gentlest pause, a check-in, a greeting, or a mindful inspection creates the biggest impact. At AGGCON, happiness is at the heart of efficiency.

> “Speed, preparation, and teamwork define excellence in breakdown management. When equipment stops, our commitment doesn’t. We move fast, so our clients can keep moving forward.”
